

Tasks for users:

1. Find the calories
2. Find the personal best workout
3. What amount of calories was lost at 2?
4. What is the current font size?
5. What is the weight of the user?
6. What is the second daily goal>

Feedback received:

1. We were told that it was confusing to have recommendations on our homepage.
2. We were also told that it would make more sense to have a more comprehensive workout summary in our workout tab.

What we changed:

1. We decided to replace recommendations with motivational quotes
2. We added a feature to enlarge the workout tabs where you can see more stats about your workouts.

Summary on Insight:

The users that tested our app design all had positive feedback, with a few things that we should have changed, like removing something that didn't make sense in a tab. Or adding something a new feature to one of the tabs. Since we didn't get any major feedback that would result in us having to redesign the main pages we decided that we would make these smaller changes. The first change was to remove daily recommendations from the home page, as it doesn't make sense to have it when you open the app, so we decided to use the space for motivation quotes to keep our clients feeling like they can achieve their weight loss. And the second change we added was a more extensive overview into the workout tab where you can see the time of your workouts, how many calories lost, the distance travelled and how many steps you took. Overall the feedback given helped us in polishing our design and being able to finish our design.
